4. To add permissions to an account, simply check the box next to the individual’s name. Note: this page automatically saves, so once a box has been checked, that individual immediately has access on their account.

Inactivating User Accounts

If you want to search for and export a list of users but do not want to include the inactive accounts, make sure the checkbox next to “Include results from inactive users” is not checked. If you want to include inactive users, check that box.

You can inactivate a WIDA user account for educators you know have retired or are no longer teaching. If the educator has simply moved to another district or Consortium-member state, they will still need a user account and their account should not be inactivated. To inactivate a user account, check the “Inactivate” box in the user lookup field.
